THE SEGMENT

A clipfarmed episode from a hit teen show with a clickbait title. A substitute arrives late, reads the first line of the teacher's lesson plan on nudify apps, decides he's got it figured out, and starts teaching. He demos the apps live for the class, putting a random adult in a He-Man-style outfit. When a student calls it inappropriate, he ignores them.

Between classes, students download the apps and start using them on each other. The next day, as the substitute returns for Unit Two, two students are already arguing because one used the app on the other. He finally realizes the lesson plan came with slides. He skips past the first half, everything he should have covered before his live demo, and lands on CONSEQUENCES. He reads felony penalties and psychological harms related to nudify apps and deepfakes to a classroom where most of the students have been using them since introduced in Unit One. The segment ends with one student quietly helping another through the takedown process.

SEGMENT 1 - NUDIFY APPS & DEEPFAKES

04 OF Management (p.14)

05 AI Chatbot / Companions (p.15)

THE SEGMENT

A video podcast from Call Him Daddy, a male-hosted parody of Call Her Daddy: fun, engaging, and full of misinformation. The host is a Harrison Sullivan-type who sells an anti-masturbation subscription to young men while producing and selling sexualized content with the women around him. An anti-porn expert has called him out for exactly this, so he brings her on for a “debate.” She is formal, informational, and correct. He shuts her down. The viewer opens the comments. The audio keeps playing, but he is barely paying attention anymore.

NoFap Ad: While the expert is mid-sentence, the host cuts her off to advertise his anti-masturbation program: streaks, a leaderboard, and promises about testosterone, alpha-maxxing, and rewiring your brain.

The Chatbot: The expert says something the boy doesn’t like, so he opens an AI chatbot tab that has been sitting in his tab bar since the start of the film. He asks if it is true, using language like, “I can’t believe XYZ is true. It feels like she’s blaming all men.” The chatbot agrees with him emotionally, then factually. Its responses are technically true, but hedged and sycophantic enough to make the expert seem less credible. Then it gets personal, referencing previous conversations about his mom and how he feels like he has no one to talk to. As he types, texts from actual people come in. He closes the notifications without reading them and keeps talking to the chatbot.

It's finally real, my NoFap app PureResist just made $126 in its first day.

Just under two months ago, I launched PureResist, an app to help people quit porn and rebuild discipline. I didn't run ads or do any paid marketing—just posted about it on Reddit a few times.

To my surprise, it picked up fast.

A peak of $135 in revenue in a single day, all organically. It's not just about the money, though. What stood out was how much people resonated with the concept: no gimmicks, no fluff, just real tools to help break free from porn addiction.

If you're building something similar, keep going. People genuinely want solutions that work.

E-pimps: On OnlyFans, young men chase fortunes by becoming 'managers'

"I don't personally manage [women onlyfans creators] but I bought an agency that does."

Do I agree with it? No.
Would I profit off of it? Yeah.

I'm a businessman, man. I'm not doing it for fucking fun. Not what my daughter will be involved with. I'd disown my daughter, like that, to say the least."

The OnlyFans management industry includes a wide range of operators, from talent management firms in Los Angeles to small-time operators, sometimes men who have given up their day jobs to try to generate maximum revenues from their wife's or girlfriend's account.

At one extreme, there is Andrew Tate. The British-US national has been charged with rape, human trafficking and other offences in Romania and faces criminal charges in Britain including rape, actual bodily harm and human trafficking, as well as a civil case brought by four women. He previously ran Hustlers University, charging $49.99 a month for courses that offered, among other things, OnlyFans management tips. "The reason women need a man to do OnlyFans is the same reason a woman needs a man to do anything - because they're incompetent and they're very, very lazy and stupid," Tate observed during one of his classes.

THE SEGMENT

A clipfarmed livestream from a young male streamer whose content escalates from appearance and looksmaxxing to peptides, crypto, and women. He brings “guests” on, introduces them as girlfriends, and uses them to teach the audience how women are supposed to look. Eventually, he brags about choking his girlfriend out. Nothing is shown.

Another guy has been sitting in the background on his phone. He finally looks up and says the choking thing is fucked up. Chat immediately turns on him, and the streamer makes him the joke for being a beta. The friend doesn’t have all the language. Just: “Nah.” “That’s your girl.” “Bro.” He gets up and leaves. She goes with him. The clip cuts off.

Search: Another video from the same streamer starts playing. While it runs, the viewer opens another tab and searches his name. Instead of more videos, an AI summary surfaces recent charges (animal cruelty, battery of a woman) and he opens an article.

The article includes the woman from the stream describing what happened in her own words, along with expert information about non-fatal strangulation and intimate partner homicide. He reads it, closes the tab, returns to the video, and hits next. The streamer is still running his mouth.

Clavicular (real name Braden Eric Peters) is a 20-year-old American live-streamer and internet personality. He is best known as the most prominent and extreme face of the online "looksmaxxing" subculture—a movement focused on maximizing physical attractiveness through unusual or harmful methods. Facebook · CNN +4

Background and Content

- Looksmaxxing: He popularized extreme physical enhancement techniques, discussing cosmetic peptide injections, teen steroid cycles, and "bone-smashing" (striking facial bones with a hammer to supposedly alter bone structure).
- Substance Use: He has openly discussed using crystal meth as an appetite suppressant to achieve a lean facial structure.
- Platforms: He built large followings on platforms like TikTok and the live-streaming site Kick. Instagram · gq +3

Controversies and Legal Issues

- Health Incidents: He suffered a high-profile, suspected drug overdose during a live stream in Miami and was hospitalized. 6abc Philadelphia +1
- Legal Trouble: He faced misdemeanor battery charges in Florida related to an incident where he allegedly instigated and filmed a fight between two women. He was also investigated and charged for unlawfully discharging a firearm after a live-streamed video appeared to show him shooting at an alligator in a wildlife

PHOENIX – The "looksmaxxing" streamer known as Clavicular was arrested after allegedly entering a Scottsdale nightclub while carrying a fake ID and drugs over the weekend, authorities said.

The Scottsdale Police Department took 20-year-old Braden Peters into custody Saturday night after he was seen entering Casa Amigos near Scottsdale and Camelback Roads in Old Town.

01	Pharmaceutical Ads	(p.22)
02	Selling Porn – Side Effects	(p.23)

THE SEGMENT

A pharmaceutical commercial selling porn like a prescription drug. Golden hour, kids running outside, a dog, a kitchen island, people dancing. Nothing on screen has anything to do w/ the product.

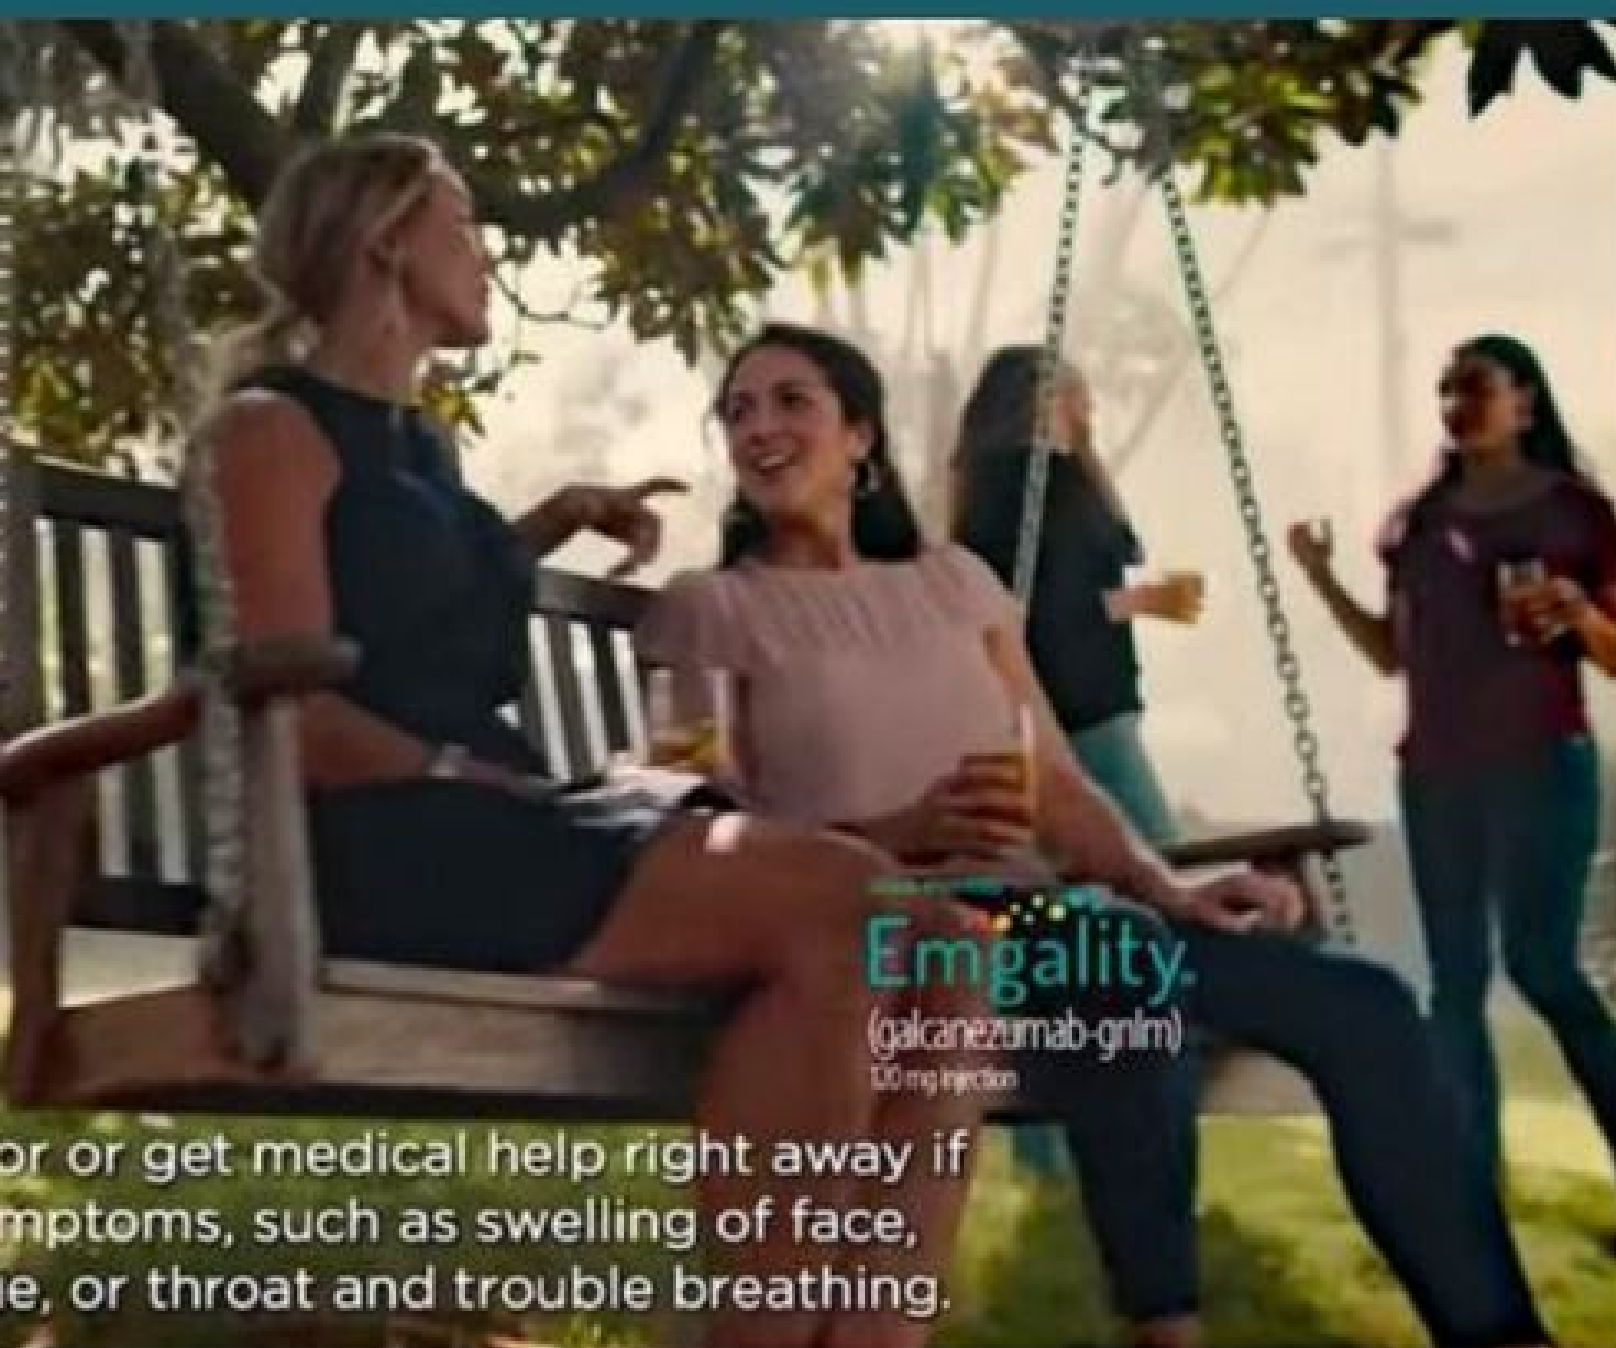

The ad invents the condition it cures — a panacea for boredom, loneliness, blue balls, social media stress. The real “side effects” (increased objectification of partners, greater acceptance of rape myths, body dissatisfaction, desensitization, etc...) are read at an almost intelligible speed. It ends with two big statements.

1. You don't need a doctor. You don't need a prescription. You don't need to be eighteen. Ask nobody if Pornexafil is right for you.
2. Most users begin between the ages of nine and twelve.

nine and twelve

Side effects may include decreased relationship satisfaction, increased objectification of partners, greater acceptance of rape myths, reduced intention to seek consent, body dissatisfaction in men and women, desensitization, and escalation toward increasingly extreme material. Some users may also experience changes in sexual expectations, attitudes, and behavior. You don't need a doctor. You don't need a prescription. You don't need to be eighteen.
